Dear Student:

I would like to welcome you to the Army Reserve Readiness Training Center (ARRTC). The ARRTC is located on Fort McCoy, Wisconsin and provides pre-mobilization and functional training both in resident and decentralized forums. Most of our students are members of the full-time support (FTS) force, both AGR and civilian, and troop program unit (TPU) soldiers of the Army Reserve. However, we also support students from all components and branches of the U.S. military, Department of Defense, and other federal agencies.

The ARRTC's primary functional elements, the ARRTC Training Centers, conduct the day-to-day training for the organization. Below are the links to the training performed by our four training centers:

In addition to resident training, the ARRTC provides Mobile Training Teams (MTT) and Distributive Learning using state-of-the-art learning capabilities. Our rapidly expanding repertoire of Distributive Learning products includes: CD-ROM, Web, Video Tele Training, Video Graphics, and Audio Conferencing. Click here for additional information on ARRTC Distributive learning opportunities.

The ARRTC provides a wide variety of services and accommodations to meet the needs of our students. Click here for information on ARRTC services, accommodations, and student administrative instructions. Again, I would like to welcome you to the ARRTC, my staff and I will make every effort to ensure your stay is both productive and enjoyable.

Sincerely,
